DETAILED ACTION

Specification

1. Claim 4 is objected to because of the following informalities:

Claim 4 specifies that the first communication is a Group System for Mobile communication (GSM) while the specification in paragraph [0017] indicated that the GSM is the second communication system. It is assumed that the word "first" in claim 4 is changed to "second" for examining purposes. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Miyashita (hereinafter "Miyashita"; U.S. Patent Number 6,453,172 B1).

Regarding claim 1, with reference to figures 1-3 and their descriptions, Miyashita discloses a method of automatically switching a communication mode of a mobile communication device from a first communication system to a second communication system (abstract, column 2 lines 20-62), said method comprising:

detecting whether said mobile communication device is located within an effective area of said first communication system (figure 3, step S12);

wherein when said mobile communication device is located within said effective area of said first communication system, said mobile communication device remain on standby in said communication mode of said first communication system (figure 3, step S13), detecting whether said mobile communication device is located within an effective area of said second communication system when said mobile communication device is not located within said effective area of said first communication system (figure 3, step S14); and wherein when said mobile communication device is located within said effective area of said second communication system, said mobile communication device is set on standby in a communication mode of said second communication system (figure 3, step S15) (please see columns 5-6 for further details).

Regarding claim 2, Miyashita further teaches that said mobile communication device set on standby in a communication mode of no communication system when said mobile communication device is not located within said effective area of said second communication system (figure 6, column 9 line 55 to column 10 line 47).

Regarding claim 3, Miyashita further discloses that the first communication system is a Personal Handyphone System (PHS) (column 6 lines 15-30).

Regarding claim 4, Miyashita further discloses that the second communication system is a Group System for Mobile communication (GSM) (column 6 lines 15-30).

Regarding claim 5, Miyashita further discloses wherein during said step of detecting whether said mobile communication device is located within said effective area of said first communication system, said mobile communication device is on standby in said communication mode of said first communication system (figure 6, column 9 line 55 to column 10 line 47, specifically steps S50, S58-S61).

Regarding claim 6, Miyashita further discloses that during said step of detecting whether said mobile communication device is located within said effective area of said first communication system, said mobile communication device is on standby in said communication mode of said second communication system (figure 6, column 9 line 55 to column 10 line 47).

Regarding claim 7, Miyashita further discloses that during said step of detecting whether said mobile communication device is located within said effective area of said first communication system, said mobile communication device is on standby in said communication mode of no communication system (figure 4, column 6 line 53 to column 8 line 9).
